the ordinary policeman at the level of the Thana in discharging his day-to-day duties. The line of communication between the policeman at this level and senior officials must always be kept open and the officials at the lower levels must be encouraged to communicate without inhibitions. Efforts should be directed to provide training even at this level to enhance motivation and morale of the force. "A caring attitude on the part of the officers towards lower formations would help in building the confidence of the constable and the force", he added.
